A reward chart can be very useful for older children. Start by writing in what your child needs to work on under the “What are we working on?” column, up to 3 per day. Now, jump to the last column labeled “What is the Reward?” and write in a reward for your child. This can be anything from 15 minutes of free-time, 30 minutes of games, 30 minutes alone with Mom or Dad, calling a friend, cash, a special meal with a friend, inviting a friend for a sleep-over, or anything you or your child find rewarding. Just gear it toward the age of your child.

Next, if the “What are we working on?” was not done for that day, check the box under “Did NOT do” and do not check anything in the “Rating” column and provide that feedback to your child. Lastly, if the “What are we working on?” item was complete, you can check the box under the number “1”, “2”, or “3” to provide feedback on the outcome. The “1” means we need to work harder, “2” is getting better but still needs some work, and “3” means good job! Alternatively, you can use the “Rating” fields to rate the difficulty level of the item we are working on. The “1” means it was difficult, “2” is not hard but not easy, and “3” is easy to complete. Get feedback from your child by having them rate the items we are working on. What we might think is easy could be difficult to your child and some chores are easy for your child that you think are difficult. Try it some time, you might be surprised by the outcome.

“I Can Do It” → “I Will Do It” → “I Did It”
